Gilletto for Governor.

It looks now as though Congressman Gillett will be the Republican nominee for governor. He has routed Pardee in a great many primaries of the state and will go to the convention with asolid north and solid south behind him. Mr. Gillett has made an excellent congressman and there is no reason that he will not make a good governor.

Lorigan Not In It.

It is pretty generally conceded that Judge Lorigan has lost his fight for Supreme Justice. Having been defeated in his own county he will not have much influence in the convention. In all likelihood Judge Burnett of Santa Rosa will get the nomination. The nominees will be Henshaw, Sloss and Burnett. The latter has been Superior Judge of Sonoma county for many years and is considered an able jurist. He is an orator of more than ordinary ability.

A Good Showing.

State Bank Examiner J. Blackstock made his examination of the San Mateo County Savings Bank and pronounced it in excellent shape. The bank's business shows a healthy gain and the deposits are over $207,000 which is an evidence of the popularity and confidence in which it is held by the people. Its motto is: "Financial strength, conservative management; stockholders of character and reliability."

While the President uttered nothing specially new in his homely address to his neighbors, he yet put old truths in such a pleasing form that they seem a fresh sermon on civic righteousness. But when we come to think of it, what new thing under the sun can a man utter? The ten commandments of 6,000 years ago can not be improved upon. Upon them hang all the law and the prophets. The best that anyone can do is to illume them by new illustrations. What adds force to the President's words is the fact that he not only knows the decalogue by heart, but lives up to it. "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say—Thou hast faith, and I have works; show me thy faith without thy works and I will show thee my faith by my works." President Roosevelt has read St. James as well as he has the laws of Moses.

It is generally supposed that the incubator is a strictly modern and American invention, but this is far from the fact. The ancient Egyptians were on to the trick and thoroughly understood the advantages of the "wooden hen" thousands of years ago. About four hundred of these artificial hatchers have been discovered as the result of recent exhumations in old cities of the Nile, which shows that at one time they were in common use.

The alleged "political news" dished up by some of the interior papers in the form of San Francisco correspondence is a shining example of the futility of trying to "guff" a public by palming off fiction instead of fact to promote covert political schemes.—Oakland Tribune.

This carge is undoubtedly true, but the stuff is almost as good as the real San Francisco letters, written to such papers as the Tribune.

Fast Young Men.

There are in Redwood City a few "fast" young men who are always spoken of as "good fellows,' and in some respects they are; but it is well to remember that they are not good fellows who indulge in pleasure at the expense of what duty demands of them. There is no lack of time for pleasure and there are ways of enjoyment for everyone; but in the long run a young man will find it neither pleasurable nor profitable to win admiration for companionable qualities from the idle, the dissolute and the vicious. There is nothing new in this—it is an old, old story—yet every day young men are seen going to the bad through the allurements of so-callde good fellowshi and the youth cannot too often or too strongly be admonished of the folly of such a course.

The Big Head.

The "big head" is a popular way of expressing a common and very frequent ailment. It arises from various sources. A little money develops it in some people; a few good clothes gives it to others; a little office, where a chance is given to exercise a little authority is often the cause of it; while others get it by having a little better job than their associates. The truth is no sensible person gets the "big head." The ones afflicted with it, are weak in intellectual caliber.

The City Department Store

One of the growing evils of this country today is the city department store. In Redwood City where we have the best of stores, the most honorable merchants, and where goods are sold at the smallest possible margi thousands of dollars are annually sent to the department stores of our great cities. Farmers expect our merchants to pay them a fancy price for butter, eggs and poultry, for their grain, potatoes and other products, and then they take the money received from our home merchants and send it to a city department store. There is neither economy nor honor in such a manner of doing business. People who patronize the big department stores should be compelled to ship their butter and eggs to them. There is not a business man in town who will not duplicate their prices for the same quality of goods, and he who turns down his home merchan to patronize these fakirs, is far from being loyal, patriotic and a good citizen.

The Redwood City Realty company closed the sale of three choice lots in the Robinson addition this week. Mrs. Tilford, the buyer, contemplates erecting a very nice little bungalow there sometime in the near future. Mrs. Tilford's interests were looked after by Attorney Harry Sullivan of Fair Oaks.

Throughout his long life Russell Sage saved on the average about $1,000,000 a year for a rainy day, whic takes the record from Noah.

Two months ago the czar referred to the members of the duma as "the best men in Russia," and it may yet be proved that he picked the winners.

Mr. Sage was probably prudent in turning over the job of giving to another member of the family. It was not his forte.

President Roosevelt is still the popular idol of the people and will continue to be so. Everyone admires his great Americanism.

A Johnny Behind the Bush

The alleged "Old Republican" who thus signs himself in an article appearing in Thursday's Democrat takes us to task for announcing P. H. McEvoy's condidacy for the office of sheriff on the Republican ticket. He no doubt is of that stripe of Republicans who are responsible for Democrats in office in a county with a two-thirds plurality. There are many of his class in this county that always have been a thorn in the side of the party. While it may not be good policy for the Republican convention to give Mr. McEvoy the nomination yet it must not be forgotten that four years ago henot only supported the county Republican ticket but canvassed the entire Third township for all the candidates and did good work as many of the successful ones will attest. Robert Chatham, the nominee for sheriff, carried every precinct in this township, largely thro the efforts of Mr. McEvoy. Perhaps this alleged "Old Republican" was a supporter of the successful Democrats that year. Who knows!

Purchased Marsh Land.

The Stauffer Chemical company of San Francisco has consummated the purchase of 1300 acres of marsh land, the unimproved portion of the Redwood City Salt company's holdings. The company is negotiating the purchase of the Salt company's plant and remaining land. Should they succeed in buying the property they will have two thousand acres on which to establish a mammoth soda ash plant. This is a large concern and will employ nearly 200 men when its plant is in operation. The manager of the company is of the opinion that they can begin manufacturing soda ash by October next. The company is the largest and richest of its kind in the United States and will be a great acquisition to Redwood City, employing as it will hundreds of men and giving an opportunity to many of our boys to learn useful trades and become useful citizens.

Thorpe, who acted as chairman of the local relief committee last April at the time of the San Francisco disaster, has succeeded in obtaining $500 from the relief committee in San Francisco for the local dairymen who sent milk to San Francisco for free distribution at that time Part of the time the local relief committee was sending to San Francisco and distributing there a thousand gallons of milk a day in addition to othe supplies, as well as maintaining two supply stations here and looking after refugees distributed through the community. Mr. Thorpe took up the matter of compensation for the local milk men, who were heavy losers themselves, and by going to San Francisco and seeing Allan Pollock succeeded in getting the $500 which was welcome, but does not cover by far the amount furnished.

The Petition Dismissed.

District Attorney J. J. Bullock, who is associated with Hiram D. Johnson in the contest of the will of the late E. F. Preston, appeared in open court Monday and dismissed the petition contesting Mr. Preston's will. The petition bristled with startling accusations against the widow of Mr. Preston, his second wife, and on account of the prominence of the family attracted a great deal of attention, but by the action of petitioner, a son of Mr. Preston by his first wife, in dismissing his contestthe truth of the accusations will never be known. The attorneys of young Preston will not state the terms of settlement, but simply reply that it was necessary to institute proceedings in order to protect rights of their client.

Dr. Blackburn for Supervisor.

Dr. Blackburn of Pescadero in this issue of the Times-Gazette announces that he will come before the next Republican convention as a candidate for the office of supervisor of the fifth township. He is a good Republican and would make a strong run.

A Philadelphia court has decided that a love letter can not be probated as a will. It is clear that in such productions the sound anddisposing mind is entirely absent.

It is better to be nobly remembered than nob'y born.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And never brought to min'?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And days of auld lang syne?

To renew old acquaintance and revive old friendship is the main purpose of the picnic of the 30th instant. Incidentally a few dollars may be raked into the church's treasury, but that's not here nor there. The social feature is uppermost. Menlo for a long time has been known as a social center. Now it bears the additional distinction of being a seismic center. And so it extends its hospitality over a wide area stopping its trains at the principal stations betwee San Francisco and New Sunset Park to take its friends aboard. Judging from the enthusiasm aroused the 30th instant will be a day long to be remembered in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

TOWN COUNCIL.

General W. H. H. Hart of Palo Alto appeared before the board of trustees Monday night and declared that the backers in the electric railroad for which he is desirous of obtaining a franchise were the Scholle Bros. of New York. The incorporate company which the Eastern banking firm is promoting is the California Terminal company which intends to establish an elaborate system of electric roads in California and bordering states. They hope to be able to connect with transcontinental roads. The terminals will be used by large Eastern trunk lines who seek to reach the Pacific. He declared that the Western Pacific was not backing the project. Among other things projected by Mr. Hart's backers is the bridging of the bay at Ravenswood which will form the outlet for a transcontinental railroad.

He stated that his electric line would run through the Pescia property and enter this city on Phelps street. At Main street crossing is to be made through the old school property to Webster street; tuence along Webster street from which it will curve into Second street; thence to Astreet and along Astreet to Arguello and along Arguello street to the northerly boundary of the city. Should this route not meet with the approval of the council any changesthat they desired would be made.

No action was taken until the views of the people could be first ascertained.

When asking for the Palo Alto franchise some time ago the General said his backer was Alexander Hermad of New York. He announced at meeting Monday night that Scholle Brothers were his backers. It would be well to find out whois really back of him before the franchise is granted.

Henry Steinberger said the water used by the Frank Tanning company was running short on account of the salt water entering one of the wells. They would need from 40,000 to 50,000 gallons a day which theyhoped to get from the city at a special rate. The council took no action on the request.

The ordinance extending the hour for selling liquor from 11 to 12 o'clock wos taken up and after discussion a vote was taken which resulted in a tie. Havey and Foley voting no and Hynding and Luscher voting yes.

A claim of the Sequoia Electric company amounting to $2902.50 for street work was allowed, and a bill of H. C. Mosher's for $550 for oiling Mound street was ordered paid.

On a Canvassing Tour.

Miss Kate Ames of Napa who is a candidate for superintendent of public instruction of California, was here Saturday calling on the leading Republicans seeking their endorsement and support. She made a good impression on all whom she met.

Miss Ames fitted herself for the work of a school teacher in the San Jose Normal School; proved successful as an instructor; was elected Superintendent of Schools in Napa county in 1894, and at the end of her term entered Stanford University, graduating therefrom in May, 1902. The following November she was without opposition re-elected school superintendent, the Democrats declining to make any nomination against her.She served as Secretary to the Northern Teachers' Association for several years; was one of the vice presidents of the State Teachers' Association in 1904; is a member of the Council of Education which is the advisory board of the State Teachers' Association, and at present is chairman of its committee on State Teachers' Reading course. She has for years been a prominent speaker in the Council deliberations and on the State Teachers' Association programs, as well as an instructor in many of the different County Institutes.

The Burmese Nirvana.

In "The Silken East" the author, W. C. Scott O'Connor, explains what that much discussed consummation of Nirvana, or neikban, is to the faithful Burmese:

And this neikban, what is it? Eternal extinction or eternal and conscious peace? The everyday Buddhist, in Burma at least, is in no doubt upon the subject, and for the rest, for an exalted idea of paradise, I do not remember to have come upon anything finer than this: "Where the believer expects to find a sure shelter against all errors, doubts and fears, and a resting place, where his spirit may securely enjoy the undisturbed possession of truth."

Clever Youngster.

Mamma—Now, look here, Tommy, didn't I give you a penny yesterday to be good? Tommy—Yes, ma, and I'm trying to be as bad as I can today just to let you see that you got a good pennyworth yesterday.

It Was Worth the Five.

A rich heiress once said complacently to a very beautiful but poor girl, "I had five offers of marriage last week."

"You are more fortunate than I," said the pretty girl; "I only got declarations of love."

Lord Spencer's Bargain.

Lord Spencer of Althorp, one of the greatest of book collectors, was at home only in his own field. One day in browsing about Bond street, London, he went into the shop of a dealer in bric-a-brac. The dealer, who knew him by sight, said persuasively:

"Here is a fine bit of pottery which your lordship really ought to have, and you shall have it very cheap—only 2 guineas."

So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home and set it in a high place. One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed his bargain.

"What did you give for it?" asked the connoisseur.

"Two guineas," answered Spencer rather proudly.

"H'm!" said the connoisseur. "At that price the marmalade should have been included."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more nor less than a shilling marmalade pot with a green thistle painted on it."

Perhaps.

"I don't have no opinion of these newfangled women's notions," said Mr. Hyde when his wife timidly expressed her desire to join the woman's self improvement society.

"But we learn so much there," ventured Mrs. Hyde.

"Don't believe it!" snapped Mr. Hyde. "Women don't know much that's a fact, but let 'em stick to their domestic duties and learn them. That's my opinion. Let 'em follow St. Paul's injunction, stay at home and ask their husbands if they want to know any thing."

"But, John"—

"I've settled it, and that's enough Jane."

"But, John, that's what women have been doing all this time, and perhaps that's the reason they don't know much."

And then Mr. Hyde threw his boot at the cat and boxed Freddy's ears for grinning.—Pearson's.

Her Vocation.

"Professor," said Miss Skylight, "I want you to suggest a course in life for me. I have thought of journalism"—

"What are your natural inclinations?"

"Oh, my soul yearns and throbs and pulsates with an ambition to give the world a life work that shall be marvelous in its scope and weirdly entrancing in the vastness of its structural beauty!"

"Woman, you're born to be a my ..."

Swiss Funeral Customs.

The funeral customs among some of the Swiss are most peculiar. At the death of a person the family inserts a formal black edged announcement in the papers asking for sympathy and stating that "the mourning urn" will be exhibited certain hours on a special day. In front of the house where the person died there is placed a little black table, covered with a black cloth, on which stands a black jar. Into this the friends and acquaintances of the family drop little black margined visiting cards, sometimes with a few words of sympathy on them. The urn is put out on the table on the day of the funeral. No one except men ever goes to the churchyard, and they generally follow the hearse on foot, though sometimes carriages are used. The horses that draw the hearse have long black cloaks on, with places cut out for them to see through.

BEQUESTS OF HEARTS.

The Dying Wish of Bruce and the Fate of Douglas.

Bequests of hearts have been by no means uncommon. Richard Coeur de Lion bequeathed his heart to the canons of Rouen cathedral, and in July, 1838, this remarkable relic was once again brought to light after the lapse of six centuries. The heart, which is said to have been surprisingly large, was inclosed in boxes of lead and silver and withered, as it was described, to the semblance of a faded leaf.

Bruce's heart was by his dying wish intrusted to Douglas to fulfill a vow which he had been unable to execute in person of visiting the sepulcher of Christ. Douglas, "tender and true," promised to fulfill his sovereign's last request and after Bruce's death, having received the heart incased in a casket of gold, set forth upon his mission. Proceeding to Spain, however, he fell in the thick of a fight with the Moors, having previous to his final charge cast the heart of Bruce from his breast, when he carried it into the ranks of the infidels, crying, "Onward as thou wert wont; Douglas will follow thee!" Bruce's heart was afterward recovered by Sir Simon Lockhart, by whom it was brought to Scotland and buried along with the bones of Douglas in the abbey of Melrose. When the remains of Bruce were disinterred at Dunfermline in 1819 the breastbone was found sawed through so as to permit of the removal of the heart.

The Cruel Plant.

A Canadian climber, the Physianthus albens, has received the name of "cruel plant" from its ill treatment of butterflies. It flowers in the month of August, and the butterflies, attracted by the perfume, hover around it in large numbers and push their trunks into the corollas to sip the honey. A pair of sensitive vegetable pinchers in the heart of the flower grips the delicate proboscis, and in spite of struggles to get free the butterfly hangs suspended until it dies. Apparently the plant has nothing to gain by the death of the insect, as it is not carnivorous, like the Venus fly trap. In fact, if the butterfly were allowed to come and go it would tend to foster the species by assisting cross fertilization. It appears, however, that the "cruel plant" came originally from Brazil, where the butterflies are much stronger and extricate their suckers from the trap. We may add that another Canadian plant, the Cnicus discolor, is charged with cruelty. The flower has a gland which secretes a viscous liquid capable of liming insects which are fond of it. Moreover, they seem to be stupefied and poisoned by it, and no reason can as yet be assigned for the deadly consequence.

A Colossal Harp.

The largest harp ever made, so far as is known, was that invented and constructed by M. Veritan, provost of Burkli, near Basel. It was known as the gigantic meteorological Æolian harp. It was 320 feet in length and was erected in the garden of its inventor in 1787. This harp consisted of fifteen iron wires, 320 feet in length, stretched between two poles. The wires were from two to three inches apart, the largest being one-sixth of an inch in thickness and the smallest one-twelfth of an inch. They were placed in the direction of north and south and inclined in such a manner as to form an angle of from twenty to thirty degrees with the horizon, being stretched by means of rollers properly disposed for the purpose. Whenever the weather changed the wires sounded with such loudness that it was impossible to go on with a concert in the house. The sound sometimes represented the hissing noise of water in rapid ebullition, sometimes that of a harmonicon and sometimes that of distant chimes or an organ.

The First Hats.

Discoursing on the subject of hats an antiquary expressed the opinion that the hat was first used quite as much for decoration as for protection. The ancestor of all hats he considers to have been the fillet, or band, around the hair worn by the ancient Greeks, among others. Probably the first hint gained by men regarding head ornaments was through observing the crests, plumes and antlers of various birds and beasts. The eastern races, with their fondness for ceremony and display, afford the most notable instances of the use of hats as signs of rank and authority. Thus in Buddhist countries the gods are represented as wearing elaborate forms of headgear. In Korea the fashion attains its height, no fewer than fifty kinds of hats being worn by the natives as indications of their social position.

He—I shall be just miserable when I have to go away and leave you.
"Oh, Jack, if I were sure of that I'd feel so happy!"—Life.

Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks and make but an interior survey of your good selves!—Shakespeare.

HABITS OF HARES.

Making the Toilet Is a Long and Careful Process.

A clever observer writes: "A good many hares find a secure retreat in the sand hills during the daytime and feed on the marshes in the morning and evening. The hour at which most of them leave the marsh varies, but it is any time before 9 o'clock. All the hares, however, do not return, some preferring to lie out all day and make their "forms" in any standing clumps of grass in the inclosures. I found this out one day while taking shelter among the fir trees from a downpour of rain. As soon as the rain got really heavy I saw first one and then another hare appear, as it were, out of the ground in the middle of the fields and race for the shelter of the sand hills.

"On their return to the hills in the morning many of them take up their station on the sunny side of a fir tree, generally on a slope, and sit there, either among the fir needles or else on the bare ground or sand, without any sort of form apparently. They like a warm, sunny seat, out of the wind, or, in wet weather, sheltered from the rain. Here they sit and sleep, unless disturbed, until an hour or two past midday.

"At some time between 1:30 and 3 o'clock they wake up and begin their toilet, which is a long and very careful process. I have seen them roll in the sand, then get up, shake themselves and finally lick their bodies all over, for the most part directly with their tongues, but those parts of their bodies which they cannot reach so—face, back of head, ears and nape of neck—are dressed by the fore limbs exactly in the same way that a cat does it.

"These toilet operations often take half or three-quarters of an hour. When complete, there is a short time of rest, then a long stretch and a yawn, fore legs first, then the hind legs; finally, the whole body is raised into an arch, after which the animal begins to move off for another feed."

ANALYZING MILK.

The Process Is Neither Difficult Nor Complicated.

The chemical analysis of milk is not complicated nor difficult. First the chemist weighs a small dish, cup or saucer and carefully notes down the results in ounces, grains and fractions of grains. Next he pours in some milk to be analyzed and again carefully notes down the result. By subtracting the weight of the dish from that of both the weight of the milk is found and recorded. Next the receptacle is placed over a steam jet, which evaporates the water of the milk, leaving only the residue or "solids." Again the dish and its contents are weighed, and by a simple calculation the percentage of solids is ascertained.

The "solids" of the milk have been found by innumerable analyses to average about 13 per cent, and while the fat varies in milk from different cows the solids left after extracting the fat are found to be a very constant quantity, seldom falling below 10 per cent or over 14. This gives the chemist a positive basis for his calculations and enables him to state with great certainty whether or not the milk has been watered.

The fat or oil in milk is determined by dissolving it by means of ether, the residue remaining after such test being termed "solids other than fat." The average fat or oil found in milk from cows is 3 per cent, and any amount less than 3 per cent indicates almost to a certainty that the milk has been skimmed. If analysis shows a decrease of fat it indicates that the milk has been watered, while if fats and other solids together are low you may infer that the skimmer has done its worst.

Truthful.

Excited Fisherman (to country hotel keeper)—There isn't a bit of fishing about here. Every brook has a sign warning people off. What do you mean by luring anglers here with the promise of fine fishing? Hotel Keeper—I didn't say anything about fine fishing. If you read my advertisement carefully you will see that what I said was, 'Fishing unapproachable.'"

His Regular Business.

"Isn't it taking your son a long time to get through college? It seems to me this must be his sixth or seventh year."

"It is, but going to college has become his regular business. Why, the team wouldn't stand any show without him."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Effective.

"What do you regard as the best protection from burglars?"

"Well, I have found that being independently poor is effective."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Changing Fashions.

Father (meditating on time's changes)—Ah, yes, the fashion of this world passeth away! Daughter—Indeed it does, papa. I shall want a new hat next week.

Composite Pronoun Wanted.

The want of a composite pronoun to express both "he" and "she," and, what is sometimes more important, to express neither he nor she, must have embarrassed every one at some time or another. There are ungrammatical ways of shelving the difficulty, such as for instance, by translating the convenient French "on" as "they," when we really mean one person who may be either masculine or feminine. The lack of a portmanteau word to express both sexes without specifying either did not, however, trouble the new maid who approached her mistress with the ingenious remark, "Please'm, a friend of mine has called—and may I ask 'er to tea?"—London Chronicle.

A Point In Punctuation.

For a century past, probably longer, the rule of the best printers and publishers has been, "Three words in the same construction are separated by commas." Two examples will illustrate the rule:

"John, James and Thomas have come.'

As so punctuated the first name is vocative, the second and third nominative. Two persons have come.

"John, James, and Thomas have come."

And now the three names are all nominatives. Three persons have come. The two meanings can be indicated otherwise only by a footnote.—New York Times.

A Stubborn Opening.

The head of the household was going through her husband's pockets the next morning.

"What kept you out so late last night?" she suddenly demanded.

"It was the opening of the campaign, my dear," the lesser half replied.

"Well, it didn't take three corkscrews to open it, did it?"

And she drew the offending articles from his side pocket and waved them before him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Swordless.

"Yes," said the condescending youth "I am taking fencing lessons."

"Good," answered Farmer Corntossel. "I allus said you was goin' to turn in an' do somethin' useful. What's your specialty goin' to be—rail, stone or barbed wire?"—Washington Star.

They Tell a Different Story.

There are peculiarities of our English language which no other language exhibits. Did you ever notice how many English words are formed by simply dropping alternate letters—for example, wheat, heat, eat, at; sham, ham, am; wheel, heel, eel; whale, hale, ale, and scores of others?

Again, we have in our mother tongue two words which, joined together, make a distinct word of an entirely different meaning, just as a single word disjointed does. Take the words "since" and "rely" or the separate word "sincerely." To illustrate:

Your letter came, in words that tempt me dearly.
You wrote them, sweet, most truly and sincerely.
For praise like that heroes might gladly die,
But on another's love you since rely.

The Squirrel Fish.

On account of the peculiar barking noise which is characteristic of squirrels a certain odd looking member of the finny tribe is called a squirrel fish. One might expect such a fish to possess a gray color or to be supplied with a tail like that of the squirrel, but beyond the bark there is no other resemblance displayed in the namesake. In color the squirrel fish is a brilliant red, which makes it a conspicuous inhabitant of the sea as it darts here and there with quick, alert movements. The body of the squirrel fish shows a few stripes and is well covered with sharp spines.

The favorite hymn in democratic communities this year will doubtless be: "Oh, turn, sinners, turn, May the Lord help you turn."

If everybody who feels a direct interest in the success of the Republican cause shall contribute a dollar to the campaign fund the gross receipts will be something overwhelming.
